Process Technician

Job Description: Perform and document daily manufacturing operations in biomedical, biopharmaceutical, and bioindustrial settings.

What does a Process Technician do?

- Operate bioprocess equipment, usually in a sterile environment.
- Monitor operation processes.
- Ensure that environmental and safety regulations are being followed.
- Produce proteins and antibodies used in disease treatment.
- Work in a clean-room environment to protect your product and yourself.
- Set up, operate, and maintain laboratory instruments and equipment.
- Develop expert knowledge of lab equipment to adjust settings when necessary and recognize when equipment malfunctions.

Your Interests:

- Are you very detail oriented?
- Do you like to work with computers?
- Do you like to look at things under a microscope?
- Do you like math?

Outlook:

Average Salary – $18.46 hourly, $55,527 annual Projected Job Openings – 14,000 over the next 10 years.

Education/Program of Study:

Associate degree in applied science or science-related technology